LOT TYPE, BUILDER, HOME PLAN AND ARCHITECTURE REFERENCE

View this Design Guideline online and store it electronically if needed. If you wish to print some of this information, please print only the section(s) or page(s) you need.

Revised: January 21, 2010

The information below – consolidated from numerous sources – is generally accurate. However, it is possible some changes occurred after the original approval from the Town Architect. Thus, physical verification at the property may be appropriate.

Is your home, or a property you are familiar with, listed below but has missing or inaccurate information? Please send corrections to the Architectural Review Coordinator (arc@celebrationtownhall.com).

NOTES FOR “LOT TYPE” COLUMN:

- General order of lot sizes, from smaller to larger. Individual lots may vary significantly.
 - Townhome (attached multi-family buildings):
 - Bungalow and Garden (including single-family, duplex and triplex homes):
 - Cottage
 - Village
 - Manor and Estate:

NOTES FOR “ARCHITECTURE” COLUMN:

- Several plans, particularly the most popular, had multiple versions of an architectural style which allowed several of the same floorplan to be constructed beside each other but with a distinctly different appearance though they were all “Classical” or “Victorian”, etc.

NOTES FOR “PLAN NAME” COLUMN:

- “(Mod)” indicates a standard floorplan was modified. The extent of modifications may range from minor to substantial.
- “Custom” indicates that some floorplan information is available, but there is no indication whether it is a unique design or a modification of an existing plan.
- Some names were used by multiple builders. For example the David Weekley Garden Wedgewood and the Cahill Custom Homes Estate Wedgewood, or the Town & Country Village Williamsburg and the Goehring & Morgan Estate Williamsburg.
